Council for final review.

"There are groups within the council who would wish for fewer courses and others who would want more," CAA chair Larry Bates said Tuesday. "But these are some exceptionally good courses, although a different member will argue which ones are and aren't exceptionally good."

Approved courses include:

- Schools, Citizens, and Society; (Education department)
- The Good Life: Theory and Practice; (Philosophy)
- Media, Society, and the Individual; (Speech)
- Comparative Politics; Global Politics; (Political Science)
- Survival of Humanity; (Leisure Studies)
- Economics of Social Issues; (Economics)
- World Regional Geography; (Geography)
- News, Media, and Society; (Journalism)
- The Sociological Perspective; Social Problems in Contemporary Society; (Sociology)
- The Anthropological Perspective; (Anthropology)
- Turning Points in the History of Religion and Science; (History)

- Nutrition and Well-being; (Home Economics)
- Principles of Human Health; (Health Studies)

"Students are not given enough variety. I'm concerned because there weren't many choices for the well-being segment," said CAA member Kathleen Shank, a professor in special education. "But that's a personal concern. I have to have faith that other members voted their conscience. We expected to vote (Tuesday) and we did."

Under the human behavior, social interaction and well-being segment, students will be introduced to the understanding of individuality and collective behavior.

"We are looking at the general education of Eastern," said CAA member Ron Gholson, a professor in secondary education and foundations. "We want to give the best possible broad education."

The CAA will meet again at 2 p.m. Thursday in the Tuscola Room of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union to review course proposals in the Foundations of Civilization, Quantitative Reasoning and Problem Solving segments of the new general education program.

The CAA also has to review courses in the Cultural Experience, Science and Senior Seminar cores.

the wrong lesson" from the lopsided Senate vote on Souter, Biden said. A more doctrinaire conservative "could well fall outside the sphere of acceptability," he said.

Souter becomes the 105th justice of the Supreme Court, filling the seat vacated last summer by the retirement of Justice William Brennan.

The court's spokeswoman, Toni House, said Chief Justice William Rehnquist would administer the oath of office in private at 9 a.m., and would administer the oath in a public ceremony in the court's ornate courtroom 15 minutes later.

The first major case in which he will participate will be a sex-bias dispute that will be argued before the justices Wednesday, Oct. 10. At issue is whether employers may exclude all women of child-bearing age — perhaps 20 million — from some hazardous jobs.

There was little doubt Souter would be a more conservative justice than Brennan, especially on matters of criminal law. But Souter's position on social issues, including abortion, would be harder to predict.

During three days of testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee, Souter declined to say whether he believed the court should overturn its 1973 ruling in Roe vs. Wade, which legalized abortion. He said he was open-minded.

On issues including civil rights and religious liberty, his testimony indicated a far more moderate viewpoint than his record would suggest.

Sen. Herb Kohl, D-Wis., a committee member, said there appeared to be "two Judge Souters."

"Fortunately, the Judge Souter who testified before our committee did not seem locked to the past," said Kohl, saying he was voting for that one and hoping the Senate had not been deceived.

Recycle service hits disposal hurdle

By MIKE CHAMBERS
Staff writer

The Charleston City Council gave a tentative go-ahead Tuesday to a proposal that would help establish a recycling service in the city.

This answered one question for resident Michael Kuo, but out of the meeting another question arose: Is there a market for recyclable material?

For the past few months Kuo has been working to establish a non-profit recycling pick-up service that would collect recyclable material from homes in the city and take them to recycling centers close by.

Kuo had been asking the city council for money to finance start-up costs.

The problem with this plan is local recycling centers may not be able to sell the recyclable material.

Carl Ball Sr., operator of Kleenwel Disposal, said he has 11 recyclable material drop centers around the area and currently his company has found the recycling portion of his business "a total negative now."

"We can't get rid of the material. Except for aluminum, we absolutely cannot get rid of other materials," Ball said.

Ball said presently glass is not being taken and there probably will not be a market for it for the next three to five years. He also said he hasn't been able to sell newspaper and plastic in at least three months.

Ball cautioned Kuo to find a market for the materials before starting a recycling pick-up service.

The city council, however granted Kuo the $1,100 he was asking for in start-up costs and arranged to sell a 1979 city van to Kuo at an approximate market value, which is expected to be $500.

In other action, the city council approved a resolution authorizing the city clerk's office to purchase a computer system to replace the present 10-year-old system.

City Clerk Patsy Loew said "it will be a busy time for a while" as the new system is installed in the city water, sewer and finance departments.

The price tag is likely to be over $50,000 and the city expects the system to be functioning by Nov 1.

The city council also approved a resolution to block off specific streets to pave the way for Eastern's homecoming parade, slated for Oct. 13.

Career Day gives jobs, butterflies to students

By LAURA DURNELL
Features editor

On Tuesday, senior sociology major Denise Feicke attended her first Career Day on Eastern's campus with a pencil, resume, knowledge and a stomach full of butterflies.

"It gets really scary during your senior year, realizing you have to find a job," she said. "I get real nervous when I try to figure out what I want to say and how I want to present myself."

Many students milled about both ballrooms of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union in suits and ties, or dresses and high heels, feeling their way around possible jobs and the realization of "the real world."

While most of those in attendance Tuesday were seniors, Shirley Stewart, director of Eastern's career planning and placement center, said a number of students also were seeking internships.

"I see underclassmen as well as seniors; I also see a number of alumni attending as well," Stewart said.

Among those Eastern alumni was Quentin Birt. Birt majored in consumer affairs and minored in business administration at Eastern.

"I just want to go in and try to sell myself," Birt said before meeting potential employers.

Birt interned with State Farm Insurance Company for about five months. He said he liked the atmosphere and would like to attain a full-time position in State Farm's claims office.

"I've been to two (career days) before," Birt says. "They were different than this; the jobs that were there were mainly just retail jobs."

This is Stewart's third year at Eastern and she said each year the Career Day has experienced growth in both students and potential employers. A total of 144 employers registered for Tuesday's Career Day.

"This tells me employers like what they see on campus," Stewart said.

Among the prospective employers on hand Tuesday were Ace Hardware Corp., Illinois Department of Children & Family Services, Pepsi-Cola and WTWO-TV of Terre Haute.

"We're looking for someone who likes adventure, can cope with situations on their own and someone who really wants to learn something and give it to someone else," said Ethel De Martino, a return Peace Corps volunteer.

De Martino said that nearly any type of major or interest is welcome.

"The Peace Corps go where they are invited. If you have the skills that a community needs, then we need you," De Martino explained.

To some companies or organizations, a bachelor's degree is just one desired attribute found in prospective employees.

"It's the willingness to work," said Ken Tylman, a Primerica Financial Services representative.

"We look for someone with a sense of humor, is flexible and has a commitment to people," said Diana Altstadt, a representative from Passionist Lay Missioners, a group described as a domestic Peace Corps with a strong emphasis on spirituality.

"We work within Chicago and Detroit, and among what we do is send out several teachers for the city schools, help the homeless and set up shelters for battered women."

Stewart said many employers also look for strong written and oral communication skills in students who can interview well and display strong work ethics.

"If they find someone with those basic qualities plus a bachelor's degree, I think that person is going to be a successful job seeker," Stewart said.

Senate tables scholarship discussion

By RYAN CUNNINGHAM
Staff writer

Faculty Senate members say they need some answers from the President's Council before taking action on the "huge" disparity between athletic and academic scholarships at Eastern.

At Tuesday's meeting, Senate Chair David Carpenter distributed copies of a page from the university's Internal Governing Policy book that detailed a scholarship system that rewards athletics far more than academics.

Under that system, Eastern athletes receive 76 percent of the Talented Student Awards, which, in effect, are tuition scholarships, awarded by the university. The remaining scholarship funds are divided up among students who excel in seven academic and extracurricular areas.

Carpenter and others on the senate have said the system should be more geared toward academic excellence.

The guidelines are mandated by Eastern President Stan Rives and the university's vice presidents, who make up the President's Council.

Senate members said they wanted to invite Rives and Verna Armstrong, vice president for administration and finance, to their next meeting so they can clear up questions on the issue, which was tabled Tuesday.

On Tuesday, senate members were curious as to where the money comes from for scholarships; why athletes receive such a large piece of the scholarship pie; how many awards are given each year and is the distribution at Eastern typical for most universities.

Former Eastern President Quincy Doudna, who retired in 1973, was the first to expand the scholarship program from exclusively benefiting athletics to include other areas.

Dan Thornburgh, director of university relations and special assistant to the president, said most universities give tuition scholarships only to their athletes.

At Eastern, Thornburgh said, "distribution has been reviewed on an annual basis by the President's Council. Sometimes people on the council have advocated that there should be more (awards) in some of the other areas, but I have never heard, in my six years on the council, any complaints that athletics have had disproportionate number of shares."

Eastern Athletic Director Mike Ryan said he is a big proponent of the tuition waiver program. "I agree with this concept," Ryan said. "It's an inexpensive way to assist an athletic program in the essence of real dollars."

Rives was unavailable for comment Tuesday.

Fraternity abandons system of pledging

By TONY CAMPBELL
Senior reporter

In an effort to change attitudes projected toward the greek community, Tau Kappa Epsilon chapters nationwide are gradually abolishing their system of pledging.

Rob Owens, president of Eastern's Tau Kappa Epsilon chapter, said that to eliminate an atmosphere which promotes hazing incidents, his chapter will begin implementing a two-week program focusing on interviews with prospective members.

"There will be two weeks where we'll talk with them and find out their interests," said Jason Valtos, social chair of Eastern's Tau Kappa Epsilon chapter. "It will be kind of like a job interview."

Immediately following the program, participants will become active rather than spending a semester classified as a pledge.

While the student will be a member of the fraternity following the program, there will be three stages of membership, each giving the student a higher status in the organization.

Tau Kappa Epsilon will still participate in Rush Week, giving rushees a chance to decide whether they are interested in the chapter. Eastern's Lambda Chi Alpha chapter also follows a similar program of associate membership.

Eastern's chapter will begin implementing the changes this semester, as a quality board and education committee has been formed.

The six-member quality board will interview rushees interested in the chapter.

The education committee will help educate members about the chapter and make sure the students are ready to move on to the next level of membership.

All Tau Kappa Epsilon chapters must completely convert to the new system by fall 1991.

While Eastern's chapter will begin much of the new program this semester, the interviewing process will probably last more than two weeks, Valtos said.

The chapter will gradually reduce the time spent on interviews to meet the national chapter's deadline.

The decision to reorganize Tau Kappa Epsilon's pledge system was made at the fraternity's 45th national convention in Indianapolis, where undergraduate representatives for the 280 Tau Kappa Epsilon chapters approved the measure.

When the abolition of pledging was first discussed by Eastern's chapter, some members were wary of the change.

"There were a lot of misconceptions," Owens said. Many of the members thought the new system would allow anyone to sign up and be a member of the organization.

But, Owens said the quality board has the ability to not approve a rushee.

"You still have to have standards," he added.

While the group hopes the new system will eliminate any chance of hazing, the fraternity also believes interest will be boosted in the chapter.

"The freshmen are probably scared right now — especially with all of the incidents lately," Valtos said.

Donald Adcock, director of public relations for Tau Kappa Epsilon, said in a previous interview that 50 deaths have been attributed to hazing incidents in the past decade.

Iraqi crisis concerns addressed

By NANCY CHIAVOLA
Staff writer

Good communication is the key to corresponding with family and friends involved in the Iraqi crisis, said Bud Sanders, head of Eastern's Counseling Center on Tuesday.

Sanders spoke to about 20 Eastern students in the Gregg Triad cafeteria about their fears and concerns for U.S. servicemen overseas.

"It's a hard thing to handle," Sanders said. "As weeks progress, more of us will have family members involved in this great world affair."

However, the sacrifice is a necessary one, Sanders said. "It's very important that we're there. It's remarkable to see the unanimous concern our country has. We need to be there."

During open discussion with Sanders, a few students shared their opinions and greatest fears about the crisis.

"I think it's more a fear of the unknown than a fear of the known," said senior Paul Krapf, a resident assistant in Weller Hall.

"It's hard to study," added junior Matthew Todt, who said he could be called overseas at anytime. "Studying isn't important anymore. I feel like I should be learning how to put together an M-60."

Sanders shared a few ideas of how people can ease the tension during the crisis.

"If it's in your belief, prayer and meditation can be helpful," Sanders said. "Set aside 30 minutes a day and go someplace private where you can think. It can take control of your mind."

Sanders also suggested people educate themselves with foreign countries and customs. "It would be easier if we knew the values and cultures of other countries and maybe this would encourage us to do so," Sanders said.

In addition, Sanders suggests people find ways to conserve energy. "It's disgusting to see people driving a car less than a mile to get somewhere," he said. "I read an article in a magazine recently which stated that America would rather go to war than carpool."

However, how soon the crisis will be over, allowing lives to return to normal, remains to be seen. Sander said. "I hope it's resolved peacefully," he noted. "There's a chance that will be. The whole world is watching, waiting and hoping."

Diverse effort needed to fight Earth's battles

Are you looking for something substantial to do this weekend?

It's a three-day week-end; you could dedicate one day and still have the rest of the weekend to yourself.

What's up? It's Catalyst 1990, being held this weekend in Champaign for students wishing to organize their fight against environmental destruction. This three-day conference is the largest student-organized environmental conference ever.

The conference is an excellent opportunity for students to find out what they can do themselves to help the environmental cause. Maybe you only want to go to do some star gazing, but if you only go for that reason, then maybe you'll get wrapped up in what the conference is really about.

Some of the scheduled celebrities include Robert Redford, Jesse Jackson, Ralph Nader, Cesar Chavez and the music of Billy Bragg and the BoDeans. Redford is scheduled to give the welcoming speech Friday evening to kick off the weekend's workshops and discussions.

But check out more than just Robert Redford. Check out what you can do or what you can learn to save the environment. But don't just do it because it's the latest fad with celebrities, do it because you know it's the right thing to do.

This year's conference isn't aimed at just the white middle class, it's for everybody. Part of the movement's theme is diversity and racial injustices in the student movement.

The environment affects everyone, and everyone should do what they can, no matter what their background is.

This isn't just another Yuppie spare-time, jump-on-the-bandwagon issue. It's something with which everyone should be concerned.

It's $30 for the weekend, but it's a chance to learn something that is very valuable. Don't let the price drive you away.

Persian Gulf crisis hits home in Paris

We read about it every day on the front page of practically every newspaper in the nation and we still really don't know what it means.

It's been written about so much that some of us have even stopped reading about it by now.

The Persian Gulf is thousands of miles away and we don't have any conception about what's happening there. Beneath the black and white newsprint, we're spoon-fed to believe that Saddam Hussein is Hitler-like and that the world must do everything it can to stop him.

By using the Gulf crisis as a front, we're conditioned to believe that the crisis is a struggle for humanity, not really a battle for oil. And we don't question it when businesses, like airline industries, arbitrarily increase the cost of their products and attribute it to the Persian Gulf crisis.

Other than the fact that we're paying more at the gas pump, we really don't comprehend how far-reaching this potential war in the Mideast really is.

But the people in a small town just 25 miles away from here do.

Never before had I questioned the Persian Gulf crisis until Sunday morning, when I watched 136 people leave the small town of Paris for Ft. Campbell, Ky. Within a month, they'll be in a desert somewhere in Saudi Arabia.

As a member of the National Guard myself, I spent all of last week in Paris helping the unit prepare for its Mideast deployment. Now, sitting here at this computer tube somewhere back on campus, it still doesn't seem real. But it is.

Four of those people are Eastern students. Two of them would have graduated this May had Saddam not decided to invade Kuwait on Aug. 2.

Jeff Madsen

One was interviewed by WEIU-TV on Thursday, the day the Paris National Guard unit was placed on active duty. She ended up crying on camera, thinking that her friends here would be watching her on television while she was far away, on an inevitable journey to the Persian Gulf.

The commander of the Paris unit, a 1984 Eastern grad left behind his wife, who is six months pregnant. Since he won't be home again until long after Christmas, his wife will be alone when she gives birth to their first child.

We read the headlines everyday: "Bush signals chance for gulf peace," "Arafat, PLO paying stiff price for siding with Iraq," – and the majority of us don't equate that with the hard-hitting reality of this issue.

The 10,000 residents of Paris will be hurting a little over the next three months. The local fire chief and the four Eastern students rode out of town on the same bus. A handful of Edgar County farmers are gone, and the fields will be harvested either by their wives, their kids or their neighbors. And a lot of Paris homes will be without a father or mother, a grandfather and even a few grandmothers.

Right now, the only sign of their return are bright yellow ribbons strewn throughout town on trees, light posts and telephone poles.

But we probably won't think about that over the next few months, as the Paris unit and the people they disappear from the headlines they've received this past week.

I know I'll be thinking about them – in a week I got to know them and in one day I saw them leave. Even worse, I saw the friends and families they left behind.

Now I hope that very soon, I'll be able to drive to Paris again.

This time, to watch them come home.

Your Turn

Theatrical effort is a group effort

Dear editor:

I would like to comment on Amber Grimes' article on theatrical costuming that appeared in the Sept. 28 Verge. I appreciate Grimes' attempt to recognize the behind-the-scenes artists of the theater, but her article presented an extremely narrow view of my job and the people I work with.

The critical flaw in the article is that it spotlights the costume designer, when, in fact, a costume design could not be realized without a talented and dedicated building crew. The crew for "Mildred Wild" consisted of several people ranging from non-majors to faculty members and student staff. Each of them deserves individual recognition for their talent and dedication.

The important thing to understand about Eastern theater productions is that the entire department gets involved and becomes a functioning body. Every person has his/her duties. If a member of the body is not functioning, (thank God) someone is usually willing to step in and take over. Our department has learned to work with each other and for each other. That, not the talent of a few people, should have been the focus of Grimes' article. That's what is most special, most unusual, and most important about university theater.

Student unaware of hill importance

Dear editor:

I have just read the letter from Ewen Bryden (appearing in the Sept. 26 edition), and I'm not too surprised. It figures that in this bureaucracy called Eastern Illinois University someone would actually want this (ski) hill. I noticed he was the chair of the Leisure Studies department. I was unaware I had to take classes to learn how to relax and have fun. But that is not the point. Do you not believe, Ewen Bryden, that the money would be better used to supplement our library? Do you believe that Boone is big enough? How about the heating and cooling system? Are you aware that many students who reside in the residence halls open their windows in winter because it's too hot while others are freezing? No, you would rather purchase kayaks for our glorified campus pond, which is what, 10 yards long? Oh gee, what fun!

I do have an honest question for you. Where on this compact campus would you put an ice rink? Tundra? (Carman residents would love this – they could play hockey between classes.)

Maybe I have been misled in my life. I always thought college was a place a person went to pay large sums of money in order to gain knowledge. Instead, I find the students pay huge sums of money so we can build rec centers, ski slopes and parking lots.

I apologize for my ignorance. After all, I'm only a student.

Eastern wrestler facing charges

An Eastern wrestler could face a possible maximum of 35 years imprisonment if he is found guilty on charges of home invasion and aggravated battery.

The Charleston Police Department reported this week that Thomas M. Hugunin, 20, a sophomore, was arrested early Saturday evening and charged with home invasion and aggravated battery in connection with an incident at a Charleston residence.

Coles County Assistant State's Attorney Mark Novak called the incident an "altercation," and would not comment on the specifics of the case since it was still under investigation. Hugunin was released Saturday evening on $1,000 bail.

The home invasion charge, classified as a Class X felony, is punishable by six to 30 years imprisonment. The aggravated battery charge, which is classified as a Class 3 felony, is punishable by two to five years imprisonment.

A preliminary hearing for Hugunin has been scheduled for Oct. 15 in the Coles County Circuit Court. At the preliminary hearing, a judge will determine if there is probable cause to believe that Hugunin has actually committed the offenses.

Students urged to register to vote

By ANITA MAIELLA
Staff writer

The Student Senate's voter registration drive is picking up momentum as more than 200 students have registered for the November general elections.

"The voter registration drive is going well," said Board of Governors Representative Brett Gerber. He added students have until Tuesday to register next to the Sugar Shack in the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union.

To register, students need to present their student I.D. as well as a second form of identification that indicates where they live in Charleston.

"It is so easy to register to vote," Gerber said. "I can register a student in 30 seconds. I call it the Brett Gerber challenge.

"It is important for students to register down here because they are living in Charleston nine months out of the year," Gerber added. "Their decisions will affect them most here.

"Registering students does nothing but benefit Eastern's population," Gerber said. "We want candidates to realize students can vote and will vote, and then maybe more attention will be given to the university."

In other business, members of the Student Baptist Ministry will come before the senate to seek recognition as a campus organization.

If the group is recognized, they would use campus facilities to promote their beliefs.

AB sends warning letter to fiscal agents

By RUDY NOWAK
Student government editor

The Apportionment Board Tuesday approved a letter which will be sent to all fiscal agents warning them of consequences of spending money left over from line item requests.

The AB is the overseeing board for the University Board, Student Senate, Student Publications, Sports and Recreation, the Players theater board and AB itself.

When budgets are set, each expenditure is assigned a specific line item with the money being spent on that assigned item alone.

However, some fiscal agents have been using money left over from various expenditures on other items not assigned by AB.

"It was brought to my attention by Tom (Jewison, last years financial vice president) and other people that there has been problems in the past," Financial Vice President Ken Wake said Tuesday.

As a result, any unjustified spending will be dealt with in a two-step process.

On the first offense a written warning will be issued to the violating board's fiscal agent, Wake said.

On the second offense, if committed during the same one-year period, the line item will be frozen until the fiscal agent comes up with an adequate explanation.

However, one board member questioned whether such an action would end up harming the students in the process.

"If we don't let them spend the line item aren't we penalizing students?" board member Ken Wasetis asked.

Wake responded by saying such spending is a slap in the face to the board which agreed on the budget.

"If the boards do abuse (the line item proposal) it is only a slap on the wrist, but it will stop the vast majority of what is going on," AB member Tony del Alcazar said.

The proposal was passed unanimously and will be sent to the fiscal agents of each board.

Job hunt Work goals, choice focus of workshop

By LISA PRZYBORSKI
Staff writer

Students who are unsure of their career goals can attend a Career Choice Workshop at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Counseling Center.

"This workshop is for students who have not made a choice of career or if they're unsure or unsatisfied with the career they've chosen," said Bud Sanders, Eastern's counseling director.

"You should have a major chosen by your sophomore year because the sooner you know what you want to do, the better off you are since we are goal-directed people," Sanders said. "The sooner we have a goal, the more easily it is to be motivated and do good work."

Sanders said counselors will help students look at how career decisions are made and provide information about certain careers that a student may be particularly suited for.

In addition, counselors also will do self-examinations of students' interests, abilities and values.

"We just used to look at interests," Sanders said. "But the difficulty with looking only at interests is that you might be interested in a particular career but might not have the ability to succeed in it."

"For example, you have to take a good look at your values because if you don't want to work the hours a job specifies, then you'd better not take the job," he added.

The workshop is free of charge, but students who wish to take the interest inventory test will have to pay $4.25.

The workshop also will allow students to use a computer to determine which careers they are best suited for. The computer will give a list of possible occupations accompanied with a job description.

The workshop is in its 10th year and Sanders said it will likely continue.

"It's been in demand since students are not sure what they want to be when they grow up," Sanders said.

Bush tries hard-sell to Americans

WASHINGTON – President Bush asked Americans Tuesday night to support a $500 billion package of tax increases and spending cuts that demands sacrifice from all. “Everyone who can should contribute something,” the president said.

Claiming rare unity with leaders of the Democratic-controlled Congress, Bush said in a 10-minute televised speech from the Oval Office that the package was written in “eight months of blood, sweat and fears – fears of the economic chaos that would follow if we fail to reduce the deficit.” “It is the best agreement that can be legislated now,” Bush said of the compromise. “This deficit reduction agreement is tough, and so are the times.”

Bush’s address from the Oval Office was nationally televised, but his message was primarily aimed 16 blocks away: at Congress, where an initial vote on the plan may be held as early as Thursday.

Although the package generally has support among Democrats, lawmakers from Bush’s own party – particularly in the House – have balked at its tax provisions. Bush himself had to abandon his “no new taxes” pledge in the face of the growing deficit. “I’m not, and I know you’re not, a fan of tax increases,” Bush said. “But if there have to be tax measures, they should allow the economy to grow, they should not turn us back to higher income tax rates and they should be fair.”

“Everyone who can should contribute something. And no one should have to contribute beyond their fair share.” Bush pointed out that the agreement had been hammered out by a bipartisan group. “The Democratic and Republican leadership tonight all speak with once voice,” he said, and he urged people to tell their congressmen they support the package.

Iraq boosts forces in Kuwait

By the Associated Press

Iraq has strengthened its forces in southern Iraq and Kuwait and has now deployed nearly half its 1 million-man army to defend the occupied territory, U.S. military sources said Wednesday.

In the Persian Gulf, meanwhile, the aircraft carrier USS Independence entered on a visit intended partly as a “show of force” against Iraq, a Navy officer said in Saudi Arabia.

The 79,000-ton carrier and several ships of her battle group passed through the Strait of Hormuz, the only gateway to the gulf, Wednesday and are now operating in the waterway, a statement from the Pentagon said Wednesday.

“The Independence and its escorts will remain in the Persian Gulf for a short period to conduct normal operations,” the Pentagon said.

More Egyptian soldiers also were headed to Saudi Arabia Wednesday.

Two ships passed through the Suez Canal headed for the Saudi Red Sea port of Yanbu. Canal officials said they carried troops and military hardware but gave no details.

At the United Nations, Iraq unexpectedly postponed its speech to the General Assembly on Monday just hours after President Bush hinted that an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait could help resolve Arab-Israeli tensions.

Iraq’s U.N. Mission gave no explanation for rescheduling the address to Wednesday. Diplomats speculated, however, that Baghdad wanted time to evaluate Bush’s message.

Earlier Monday, Iraqi Ambassador Abdul Amir al-Anbari praised Bush for saying he preferred “a diplomatic outcome.” In his speech, Bush said Iraq’s unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait could create “opportunities: for Iraq and Kuwait to settle their differences permanently; for the states of the gulf themselves to build new arrangements for stability; and for all the states and peoples of the region to settle the conflict that divides the Arabs from Israel.”

The U.S. military sources in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, said analysts estimate there are well over 400,000 Iraqi troops in southern Iraq and Kuwait, compared to 360,000 a week ago.

Freshmen help men's harriers

By BRIAN HARRIS
Staff writer

For most distance runners, the transition from high school to college is usually a difficult one. In high school, cross country races rarely exceed 5,000 meters. But in college, races are run over 8,000- and 10,000-meter courses.

Also, on the average, high school training programs are designed to be much lower on the intensity scale as opposed to college programs.

Eastern has four talented freshman distance runners that are in the process of making this transition. Eric Graham, John Eggenberger, Chadd Morrissy and Kendrick Bond help make up Eastern's 15-man cross country team.

Two of these runners have already made Eastern's traveling team. Kankakee native Eggenberger came to Eastern as the 1989 class A state champion in cross country and has already finished among Eastern's top seven on several occasions.

Bond, from Washburn, entered college with impressive credentials himself, finishing 15th in the state cross country meet and fifth in the Class A 800-meter run with a seasonal best of 1:56.0. Bond has been performing consistently as Eastern's 10th man in the meets, which allows him a place on its traveling team as well.

Bond knew early in high school that he would be attending Eastern and possibly running for the team.

"My high school cross country coach John Goddard played football and ran track here at Eastern," said Bond. "So I heard a lot about the school and the athletic program through him and I decided this was where I wanted to go."

Morrissy and Graham are also making a good adjustment and are contributing to the team's success.

Morrissy comes from a very successful distance program at Dundee-Crown High School in Carpentersville. He was his conference's 1989 1,600-meter track champion in 4:35.5 and was on a talented 3,200-meter relay team that missed qualifying for state by one place.

"After coming that close to state, I was kind of depressed about my running," said Morrissy. "So I wasn't sure at first where I was going to go to school and furthermore whether I was going to continue competitive running. But I came to Eastern and liked the cross country program and decided to come out for the team."

Graham was set on coming to Eastern but not so sure about pursuing cross country.

"Eastern was my first choice, but I kept changing my mind on whether or not to come out for the team," said Graham. "I came out for the team and found the amount of training and racing distances were a lot different than in high school. But I get along with the guys on the team and the coaches really work with you and help you adjust."

Assistant cross country coach John McInerney said the new runners are adjusting nicely to the new program.

"Going from high school to college is a tough change," said McInerney. "But they're all coming along just fine. We thought Eggenberger would be able to come in right away and contribute, and we were ready to help the others along as much as they needed."

"The first year is always an adjustment year. We never expect a lot out of the freshmen. We just want them to get accustomed to the new program and lay the ground work for future track and cross country seasons."

"They're encouraged to be patient and make the necessary adjustments. This is a good group, though I'm happy with how they've progressed so far and I'm confident in their future possibilities."

Golfers finish sixth in MCC after poor first-day scores

By RYAN CUNNINGHAM
Staff writer

Although disappointed with outcome Tuesday, coach Paul Lueken said he was happy with the way that his golf team battled back after digging a first-round hole at the Mid-Continent Conference tournament.

Eastern finished a disheartening sixth out of eight teams with a 54-hole, four-man total of 939 at The Rail Golf Course in Springfield.

"We just had one of those rounds," Lueken said after the team shot a first-day total of 322 compared to first-round leader Cleveland State's 302. "In all honesty, we should have finished fifth."

Going into the tournament, Northern Illinois, Akron and Western Illinois were considered to be the top three teams in the conference, and there were no surprises.

Offense

• From page 12
17 and 23 points, respectively. But in the second game at Northwestern Louisiana, three starters suffered knee injuries – fullback John Sengstock, guard Brad Fichtel and tight end Tim Moore. Fichtel had orthoscopic surgery soon after his injury.

"I'd be naive to say that those players don't make a difference," Wittke said. "We just haven't been able to fight through the adversity like I thought we could."

"We're capable of doing good things. What's frustrating to all of us is not being able to the ball in the end zone. We can't worry about people that are hurt. There's frustration – we're trying to force things and our confidence level has been effected."

Wittke pointed out that out of 67 plays that the Panther offense made Saturday, 10 were for negative yardage and three resulted in turnovers.

"If you take away those 13 plays, we gained about 370 yards in 54 plays," Wittke said. "Things have Northern Illinois took top honors, shooting a four-man total of 908. Akron finished only two strokes off the pace with a team total of 910, while Western finished third with 915.

The Panthers finished behind fourth place Northern Iowa's score of 920 and Cleveland State's 937.

Western's Dusty Watson captured the individual title, shooting an impressive 219 after three rounds.

Senior co-captain Kevin Triefenbach, in his last season at Eastern, finished in the top 10 out of approximately 40 competitors with a 229.

"Kevin had two real bad holes on the back nine of the first 18 and just couldn't overcome the deficit," Lueken said. "He's probably one of the best golfers in the conference and he proved it by coming back the way he did."

In his sixth season at Eastern,

Lueken added that Triefenbach is the best golfer he's coached, being named as an all-conference performer two times and earning a number of "golfer of the week" honors. "I have to find a replacement for Kevin," Lueken said. "Those are some tough shoes to fill. He is responsible for getting notoriety for Eastern's program with his accomplishments."

Complimenting Triefenbach at the tournament were junior Tom Rank's three-round total of 231 and senior John Hamilton's score of 237. Freshmen Craig Cassata and David Henry both shot 249 after 54 holes to round out the team's score that was 94 strokes better than last season's conference tournament.

"I'm really proud of our guys," Lueken said. "We have a team of younger players that are getting better each tournament, and to come back in the second and third rounds the way we did speaks well of our guys."

as possible to be a solid offensive team.

"Jamie's a kid that we have to find a way to give the ball to as many times as possible," Wittke said. "We feel that we have to give the ball to him 25 to 30 times a game to be successful. He's an outstanding player."

Spikers lose 5-game match before break

By ANN TASTAD
Staff writer

Eastern's volleyball team lost its fourth match in row Tuesday night to Butler University 15-9, 13-15, 15-9, 10-15, and 15-10. The Lady Panthers are now 8-12 overall on the season while Butler upped its record to 10-7.

"It was a typical Eastern-Butler match," said coach Betty Ralston. "We always seem to go four or five games with them."

Eastern was led by senior tri-captain Diane Kruto with 15 kills, 32 digs and three blocks. Senior Cindy Geib added 14 kills and nine blocks – five of them solo – to help the Eastern cause, while senior Deanna

Lund returned to action after suffering an ankle injury last week to chip in 13 kills and three blocks. Freshman Amy Van Eekeren had 46 assists and six kills for the Lady Panthers.

"Our blocking was strong, especially Cindy's," said Ralston, whose team will take a nine-day rest before opening its conference schedule Oct. 12 at Indiana State. "We just let them get too many points early in the fifth game." The Lady Panthers were down 7-2 and 10-3 in game five before they got into the game.

"We got back in it, but we just didn't have enough fire power at the end," Ralston said. "It's disappointing to lose because this was another match we could have won."

Panther halfback finds home on Eastern's Lakeside Field

By R.J. GERBER
Staff writer

Junior midfielder Steve Baker has found a home at Eastern.

After spending his first collegiate soccer season playing for Evansville, Baker transferred to Eastern and is the leading scorer for the Panthers this season with three goals and an assist through nine games thus far.

Baker said that he didn't like the style of play that Evansville coach Fred Schmalz employed.

"I just didn't like it there," Baker said. "The school was too small. I was used to being around more people. Also, I didn't really get along with the coach. He didn't suit my style of play."

Baker talked to his old high school buddy, Tom Pardo, when Eastern took on Evansville in 1988. Baker told him that he wasn't very happy at Evansville.

Baker and Pardo played together at Aquinas-Mercy in Florissant, Mo. Pardo, a fullback at Eastern, mentioned to Panther coach Cizo Mosnia that Baker was looking for somewhere else to play, and Baker ended up at Eastern.

"I got my release from Evansville and I came to Eastern. I liked the school and the guys on the team were more my type."

Being the leading scorer is something that Baker said he doesn't worry about.

"I'm not concerned with that," Baker said. "I'm surprised by it. I look to set up things more than anything else."

Baker said that he is not completely satisfied with his play this year.

"I'm looking for what else I can do," he said. "I'm not playing up to my potential."

Baker said that his coolness under pressure is his biggest asset.

"My composure is the best part of my game," Baker said. "I can also get rid of the ball quickly when I have to. When I am in a pressure situation, I feel comfortable."

Pardo said that he realizes the positive effect that Baker has been on the Panther soccer squad.

"Steve is a good, creative player," Pardo said. "He has made an impact. He can do a lot of things on the field with or without the ball."

Lack of execution is hurting offense

By CHRIS BOGHOSSIAN
Sports editor

After scoring just 24 points in its last three games and averaging only 12.8 points per game, Eastern's offensive unit has some questions to answer.

Last Saturday, the offense equaled its lowest point total of the season in a 28-7 loss to Gateway Conference opponent Illinois State. Going in to the team's contest against Western Saturday in Macomb, Eastern is last in the conference in scoring offense, averaging just 12.8 points per game.

So why isn't Eastern putting points on the board?

"First and foremost, there's a lack of execution," said offensive coordinator Roy Wittke. "We evaluate films each week and have found that we have individual breakdowns at individual places. That's the first point.

"Number two, we have to evaluate what we're doing and what we're asking our kids to do. We have the philosophy that we want to put the kids in the best position possible to put points on the board."

Wittke said that two things are vital to turning things around on offense.

"One, we have to continue to work hard at executing," he said. "And two, we have to look at things to better handle other teams' pressure."

Pressure has hurt the Panthers in their last two games. In those games, in which it lost to Murray State and ISU, the opposition has sacked freshman quarterback Jeff Thorne 11 times for a total of 92 yards.

In its first two games, Eastern's offense did a decent job, scoring

Believe it or not, hockey season's set to face off

With the hockey season just a day away, the 80-game race not to be eliminated from the National Hockey League playoffs begins.

But let's face it — most people around here are only concerned with two teams — the Chicago Blackhawks and the St. Louis Blues.

I have a sinking feeling the Blues will win the Norris Division.

There, I said it; I don't like it, but I said it anyway.

The acquisition of Geoff Courtnall and Scott Stevens by St. Louis should shore up the deficiencies the Blackhawks exploited during the playoffs last year.

In Courtnall, they have a solid forward who can put the puck in the net consistently. In Stevens, they obtained a strong, physical defenseman who can clear out the front of the net.

The two will be the perfect compliment to Brett Hull — who led the league with more than 70 goals — Adam Oates and the young Rod Brind'amour.

Rudy Nowak

Hull should be content with his rather large (and deserved) salary increase after last season's impressive showing.

Stevens should also be happy with the deal that St. Louis gave him, after it signed him away from the Washington Capitals.

The rest of the league may not be as happy with those two deals because they open the possibility of a price war for talented players, but that is for another column.

Now just because I admit the Blues will win the division doesn't mean the rest of the Norris Division is going to roll over and die.

The Blackhawks have been busy during the off-season, too. They strengthened their defense by obtaining the services of Chris Chelios, another solid defenseman known for his physical play and defensive skills. Chelios will add to the development of Dave Manson as well as compliment Doug Wilson and Keith Brown's defensive skills.

The Hawks have a bright young player in Jeremy Roenick, who, with Steve Thomas, Steve Larmer, Michel Goulet and Adam Creighton, should make up the void left by Dennis Savard.

While the Hawks' goaltending is still a mystery, at least they still have four net minders to choose from.

As for the other Norris Division teams, look for Minnesota to start making some moves.

The North Stars hiring of Bobby Clarke as general manager should bring some of the fire of the Broadstreet Bullies to Minnesota. (Non-hockey fans note: the Broadstreet Bullies was the nickname for the Philadelphia Flyers teams of the 1970s known for their rough, sometimes brutal, play). Their continued development is guaranteed with Clarke's competitiveness and his winning tradition.

While many of the North Stars' players are not the youngest anymore, they are talented. Neal and Aaron Broten, Mike Gartner and Brian Bellows can help young Mike Modano develop his potential.

As far as the Toronto Maple Leafs and the Detroit Red Wings are concerned, it should be a hotly contested race for the last playoff spot in the Norris.

But regardless of who doesn't make it to the playoffs, the Norris Division will no longer be the doormat of the NHL, and the other 16 teams in the NHL better come to play.
